A little about Kalamazoo...
The origin of the name Kalamazoo involves a Native American from the Potawatomi ethnic group named Fleet Foot. To win his bride, he successfully ran from the settlement to a point on the river and back before the water then heating in a pot boiled away.

The translations “boiling pot,” “where the water boils in the pot,” “boiling water,” or “place where the water boils” all originate from this legend.

Kalamazoo has also been called...

“The Paper City” for its many paper and cardboard mills;

“The Celery City,” after the crop once grown in the fields north, south, and east of town; and

“The Mall City,” after construction of the first outdoor pedestrian shopping mall in the United States in 1959

Kalamazoo is also known for these products:

- Beer
- Mint flavoring and oil
- Gibson guitars
- Checker cabs

The fertile soil on which Kalamazoo is built has led the area to most recently be called the “Bedding Plant Capital of the World,” as the county is home to the largest bedding plant cooperative in the U.S.
And most recently for

The Kalamazoo Promise is a pledge by a group of anonymous donors to pay up to 100 percent of tuition at any of Michigan's state colleges or universities for graduates of the public high schools of Kalamazoo, Michigan.
